Abstract

The Higher Commercial School in Varna is the oldest business high school in Bulgaria. Its first university curricula played a pioneering role for the establishment of higher business education in Bulgaria. Significant place in the first university curricula was reserved for language teaching. Distinguished philologists who had graduated abroad were recruited to teach foreign languages. The aim of this paper is to investigate the role of the foreign language teaching in the university curricula and to promote the names and work of the first language lecturers at the Higher Commercial School in Varna.

Key words: foreign languages for economists, foreign language lecturers, Higher Commercial School – Varna.
